THE NATIONAL SOCIETY OF THE COLONIAL DAMES OF AMERICA IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

Photography from Feastivities

Located at 1630 Latimer Street, Philadelphia, the Colonial style house and gardens serve as the Pennsylvania Headquarters for The National Society of the Colonial Dames of America. Ritter and Shay, renowned Colonial revival architects, designed it and construction was completed in 1921.

The Society is comprosed entirely of women who are descended in their own right from an ancestor of worthy life who, residing in America colony prior to 1750 rendered efficient service to his country during the Colonial period, either in the founding of a State or Commonwealth, or of important position in a Colonial government, or who by distinguished services, shall have contributed to the founding of our nation.

The objects of the Society are to collect and preserve manuscripts and traditions, to preserve and restore buildings connected with the early history of our country, to diffuse information concerning the past, to create a popular interest in Colonial history and to stimulate a  spirit of true patriotism and a genuine love of country.

The Society awards scholarships to outstanding students of American history, welcomes new citizens into the country at Naturalization ceremonies, and demonstrates it concern for other citizen's principally American Indians.

In addition, the Society's historical research program is well known for its collection of slide films, flags and other historical date on Colonial times.

The Society also contributes to the preservation of several homes. The NSCDA restored and provides staff for Stenton, one of the finest early American homes located in Philadelphia; which is open to the public. Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of George Washington in Northhamptonshire, England, is a superb example of a modest Tudor home. In 1924, the NSCDA generously endowed Sulgrave Manor House and co-operates with the Board in its upkeep. Gunston Hall, located souted of Washington, D.C. is the plantation home of George Mason, author of America's first Bill of Rights. The National Society of the Colonial Dames of America are Stewards of this home and we preserve the building and grounds, as well as provide educational tours and programs.

Dumbarton House, located in Washington D.C. serves as National Headquarters of The National Society of the Colonial Dames of America and remains open to the public as a Federal Period Historic House Museum.
